Chief Jim Holler served 19 years in law enforcement, including 16 years as Chief of Police for the Liberty Township Police Department in Adams County, Pennsylvania. During that time, he also spent eight years as the department's Fire Marshal, an experience that continues to inform and enrich his training work. Before entering law enforcement, he served for 23 years as a paid firefighter in Montgomery County, Maryland.

An internationally recognized speaker, Chief Holler specializes in crimes against children and has trained thousands of attorneys, judges, law enforcement officers, medical and mental health professionals, public health personnel, social workers, and child advocates across the United States and abroad. His instruction focuses on child abuse investigations, social worker safety, and related high-risk topics.

Chief Holler is the Executive Director of Firefly, an independent sexual abuse investigative organization, and has led numerous investigations for major religious institutions nationwide.

As an Internet Crimes Against Children Investigator, he has conducted proactive online investigations resulting in multiple arrests for possession of child pornography and undercover operations involving the solicitation of minors.

He is also a co-founder and former board president of the Adams County Children's Advocacy Center in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, and a past board president of the Wetzel-Tyler County Child Advocacy Center in Paden City, West Virginia.
